Helping the Children of Prisoners

Children of prisoners are an invisible group. Rarely are the adults taken into the prison system asked if they are parents and if they would like to stay in contact with their children. Further, when they are released, support programs to help them with the parenting skills they desperately need are even more rare.

On any given day in the United States, there are 7.3 million children with one or both parents under federal or state supervision. The figure is believed to be much higher, as it does not reflect children whose parents are in county or city jails. Seventy percent of these children, according to the United States Senate, will end up in jail themselves.

What help is available to these throw-away children?

- Mentoring - see <<http://www.amachimentoring.org>> for information on the Amachi Program which has helped over 3,900 children of prisoners.
- Literacy programs - such as Reading is Fundamental (RIF), Words Travel Program at <<http://www.volunteersofamerica.org>>, and ALA's Prisoners Read to Their Children Program <<http://www.ala.org/ala/ascla/asclapubs/interface/archives/contentlistingby/volume25/prisonerschild/prisonersread.htm>>
- Summer camps such as Hope House <<http://hopehousedc.org>>
- Vocational training/job promotion and leadership opportunities for ex-felons.
